MAN IN ARMY GARB HELD AS SWINDLER

Police Think Prisoner Is Man Who Abducted Seventeen-Year-

BOSTON, June 30 -- In a man who was arrested while parading the streets in regular army uniform, the police be lieve they have the notorious "Lieu-tenant Capehart" who swindled a numer of wealthy New Englanders by posing as a naval officer, and who is want ed on the charge of having abducted Anna Louise Behner, the seventeen year-old daughter of a wealthy Hartford man more than a year ago.

The man gives his name as James E.

Moore. He denies that he is the much wanted lieutenant, but refuses to say anything about himself. He admitted that he had no right to wear the uniform.

Moore is a ready talker. When arrested he professed to be very indignant, and for a short time Patrolman Miner, who apprehended him, feared he had made a mistake.

confronted with no ordinary crime and were on the trail of a wonderfully resourceful and ingenious criminal. His resourcefulness is barely indicated in the fact that he went to the expense of having special letterheads printed in order to disarm the suspicions of his victim, and that he, furthermore, must even have gone to the trouble of purchasing a corking machine, without which he could not have placed the crown cork on the poisoned bottle of ale.

Try to Locate Printer. Friends of Dr. Wilson, and he has very many, were closely questioned, with some degree of success, by the detectives. The poisoned ale package was traced to the express office from which it was delivered, and every ef-fort is being made also to locate the printing office in which the forged let-terheads of the brewing company were printed.

The post-mortem performed on the body on Sunday by Dr. Wadsworth established beyond a doubt that cyanide of potassium was the poison used by Dr. Wilson's murderer, and the fact that the physician lived until he reached St. Joseph's Hospital is accounted for only by the fact that the dose was greatly diluted with ale, and that the doctor took only a small swallow before he detected its peculiar taste and endeavored to save himself.

The detectives have a very hard task before them in tracing the poison to the murderer, and Coroner Jerman said that the mystery may remain unsolved for several days, though no effort will be spared in laying the entire plot bare. The police will have the fullest assistance from the postal inspectors, who believe they will be able to trace the letter at least to the point from which it was mailed, and perhaps even to the

Despite the unsavory reputation that Dr. Wilson had professionally, he had a large circle of friends, who repeatedly Signorth Seventh street adjoins the Second Dutch Reformed Church in which his little daughter is a Sunday school pupil and in whose congregation the physician had a reputation for open-handed charity. At the home of Dr. Wilson yesterday no information could be had about where the dead physician came from, though the distant relatives and friends in charge of the house declared that he was a regular physician, graduated from a New York college. He took an active part in the politics of the Thirteenth division of the Thirteenth ward, and was as liberal with his money in politics as among his friends and neighbors.

Arrest in New York May Clear Mystery

NEW YORK, June 30.—Detectives from Philadelphia reached New York today in a hunt for the murderer of Dr. William H. Wilson, who died after drinking ale from a bottle since discovered to contain cyanide of potassium. The bottle of ale, it has been learned, was sent to Dr. Wilson from New York, and there are now two clues to the identity of the sender.

Detective Frank Paul, of the Philadelphia coroner's office, reached New York with several assistants, and immediately went to the district attorney's office to confer with the county detectives. He is working on two clues and said that he expected to make an arrest in New York within the next twenty-four hours.

The police of Philadelphia learned to rest in New York within the next twenty-four hours.

The police of Philadelphia learned to-day that Dr. Wilson had a large practice, chiefly among wealthy women, and they believe that the murderer is the husband of one of his patients. The police are of the opinion that vengeance was the motive benind the crime.

Dr. Wilson's career in Philadelphia has been something of a mystery, and the police believe that the clearing up of this mystery will disclose the motive for the crime.

An examination of the wardrobe showed everything topsy-turvy. The detectives wanted to solve the mystery as soon as possible, and Mr. Severns, partly dressed, was waiting impatiently for the gumshoe artists to find his trousers. With that remarkable instinct that is almost akin to second-sight, the detectives began questioning the servants. In the meantime news of the disappearince of the trousers had spread hroughout the house, and the guests of larceny.
